It wasn't just another evening.

A cool breeze had wafted in without an announcement.

Soon the sky was blotted by an army of dark clouds.

The faint sound of a distant thunder.

The unmistakable smell of wet earth.

The rain fell pitter-patter on the windshield.

We wasted no time in getting home.

And rushed to the terrace.

That was our first shower together.

*That evening
I sent him to receive my parents.*

So that I could surprise them with their favourite kesari.

*But their biggest surprise turned out to be the well-kept house.
Of course, we had a lot to talk.*

But I couldn't help frequenting the kitchen.

*I had to serve dinner at 8.
That's the clock they've always followed.*

The dinner was nothing fancy.

Rasam and some potato fry.

*But when they asked for second helpings,
I knew it was well received.*

Later, appa wanted to watch some TV.

"No appa, it's time for bed."

He couldn't believe his ears. Amma just smiled.

*That's the first time
I felt like a grown-up in front of my parents.*

*"Congratulations,
you are going to become a father",
said the doctor.*

We heard exactly what we came to hear.

And we made sure our parents heard exactly what they've always wanted to.

The doctor prescribed a few dos and don'ts drawn from her professional experience.

*Our parents sent us a far more elaborate dossier,
compiled from their unpublished wisdom.*

One impatient month after another crawled by.

But one fine morning, our little guest came home.

*And he brought with him,
our entire curious neighbourhood.*

It was a long, tiring day.

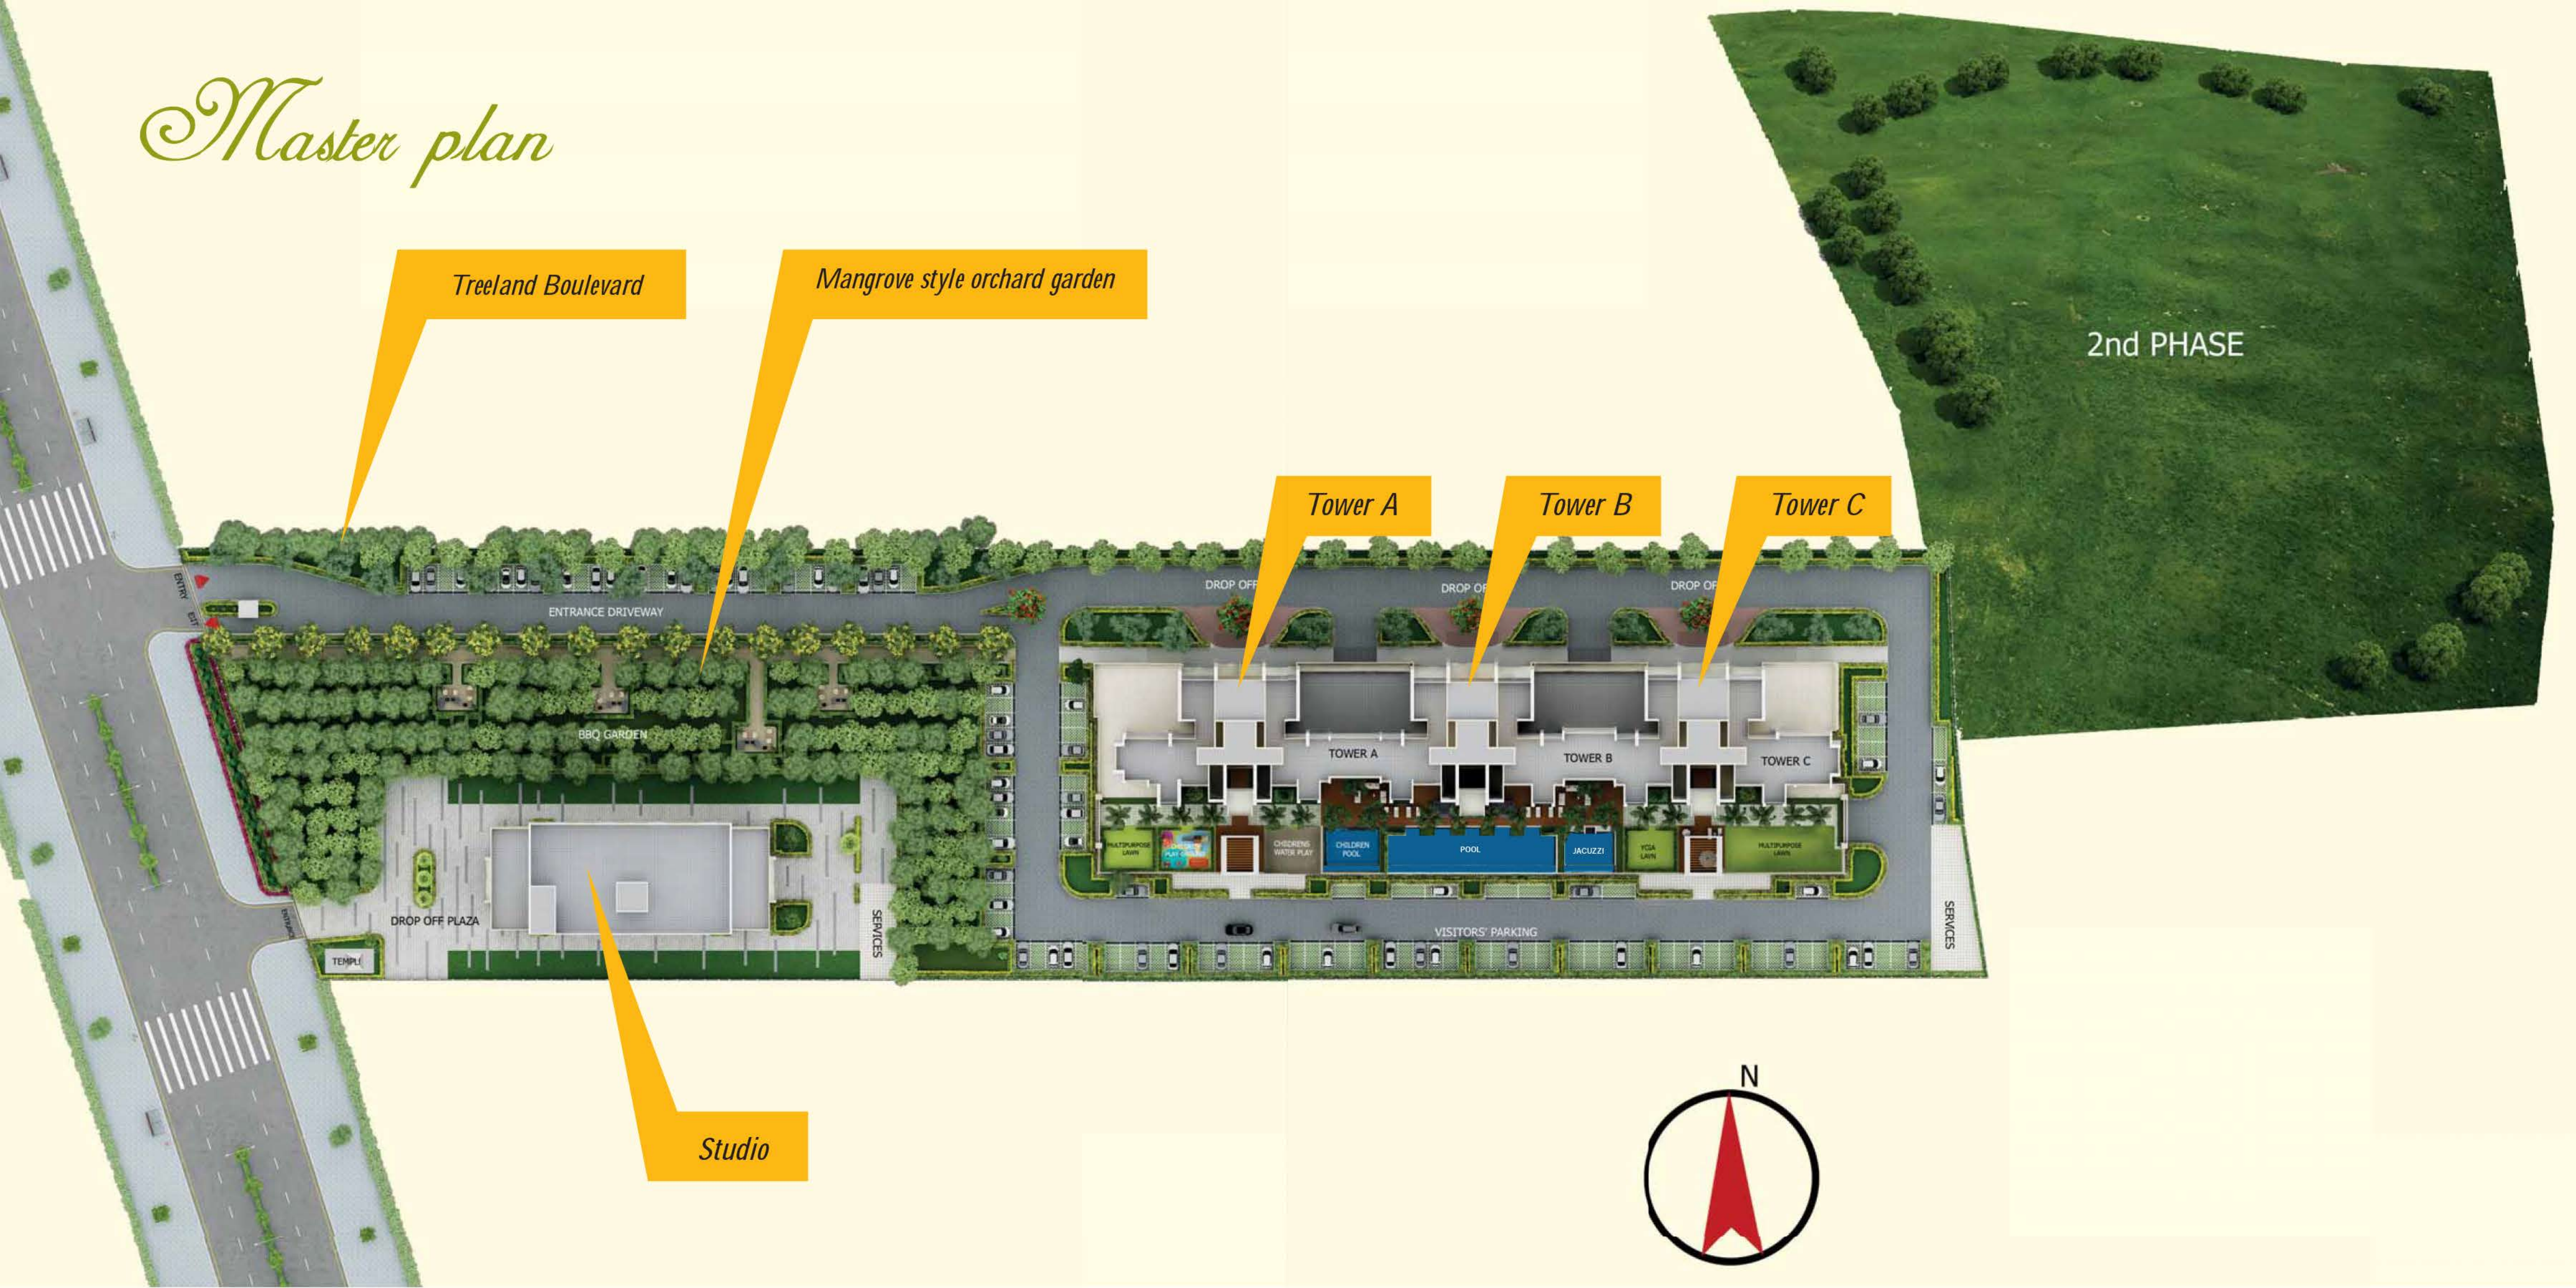

*At the end of which,
both of us couldn't wait to get into bed.*

But with wide empty eyes, it looked like the little one had other plans.

So I had to take matters into my own hands, literally.

*That's the first time daddy tried his luck
at a makeshift lullaby.*

*Three months after the wedding,
we chanced upon an unexpected gift.*

*A little paunch.
I advised her to stay off
ice-creams and chocolates.
She ordered me to stay away
from the office parties.
But that was never going to be enough.
Thankfully our home came with the luxury of a jogging track.
It was kind of an awakening.
We also woke up to the morning alarm. 6:30 a.m.
And we were already on our third lap*

That's the first time we realized that fitness can be fun when you have good company.

Filled with many fun activities, the kids' play area is the perfect place for children to enjoy and make new friends.

Children can go wild in the Kid's pool and wet play area

*The first thing our window opened to
was a heated conversation.*

*She decided long back that the curtains had to be

I was rooting for something more simple and earthy.

She said "Brown doesn't exist in my palette."

"I grew out of pink when I was 10," I retorted.

*We never spoke during lunch.
But the silence couldn't sit through dinner.*

*We decided to meet midway.
From then on, it's been fun to watch the
